Advanced Programming

Assume a sorted array of integer numbers is given. Write a program to read a number and find it in the array. Use binary search algorithm. Print an error message if the number is not in the list.

Modify your program to store the name and phone number of some students. Then sort the list using the name field. Next read a name and find the corresponding phone number. If the name is not found your program should print an error message.